

computer
emporium

Helping YOU Use Computers More Efficiently

STUPID COMPUTER TRICKS 2014

Minix PC

I used to use a Western Digital WD Live Media Player box to play all my movies I've collected on external Hard Drives on my big screen TV. This worked well for the past few years.

Well, I have seen the future and it's called the Minix PC.

It's a small pocket sized PC that comes loaded with Android software capable of not only playing movies and music but also has the full Internet and Computer Smarts to do much more.

It connects to your Internet easily whether by cable or by Wifi, letting you do all those great Internet things like surfing, research, email, watching YouTube videos and checking your Facebook account, all on your television from the comfort of your couch.

The actual PC is very small, only about the size of a pack of cigarettes, easily fitting into anyone's home theater system or the smallest TV stand.

It was quick and easy to plug into my big screen TV using one HDMI cable. I then connected my external Hard Drive containing all my movies, music and photos.

The Minix PC found all the media files on the connected hard drive and prepared them for my listening and viewing pleasure plus it has the entire Internet available to me including YouTube.

It came with a remote control for basic functions but I found it easiest to use by adding a small wireless keyboard with a built in trackpad, my "couch keyboard" I call it.